Retiree Rehire Information

Personal Tax Credits Return (TD1 Forms)

As a retiree rehire, you may receive income from more than one source (e.g., pension and employment earnings). The Basic Personal Amount can only be claimed with one income source. As such you cannot claim the Basic Personal amount on the income earned at NSH as well. If this applies to you, follow these steps when completing your TD1 Forms:

- Complete your personal information at the top of the forms.
- Enter $0.00 on:
    - Line 12 of the Provincial TD1
    - Line 13 of the Federal TD1
- Sign and date page two of the form.

If you are unsure whether this applies to your situation, review the TD1 instructions or consult the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) or a qualified tax advisor before completing the forms. Nova Scotia Health Payroll Services cannot provide individual tax advice.

Banking and Personal Information

Nova Scotia Health has your pre-retirement banking and personal information on file.
Complete the following only if your information has changed since retirement:

- Section A - Direct Deposit Enrollment Form (banking information)
- Section D - Employee Personal Data Form (personal information)

Canada Pension Plan (CPP)

As a retiree, you may also be receiving Canada Pension Plan (CPP) benefits.
If you are between ages 65 and 70, receiving CPP, and working for Nova Scotia Health, you may choose to either:

- Continue not contributing to CPP, or
- Resume CPP contributions until age 70.

If applicable, complete the Election to Stop Contributing to the Canada Pension Plan, or Revocation of a Prior Election form. Submit the original to the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) and a copy to Payroll Services.

If you are under age 65, receiving CPP, and working for Nova Scotia Health, CRA regulations require you to resume CPP contributions through payroll deductions.
